Dos and Don'ts of Packing

Don't pack the basics. Don't take perfume and deodorant with you. Buy these items once you get to your host city. Of course you'll need your toothpaste and maybe the deodorant, but be smart and use big sizes.

1. shampoo 2. _____

Do bring comfortable shoes. If you only bring one pair of shoes with you, go for the most expensive pair!

3. _____

Don't let your passport, ticket, credit and debit cards, some cash and your new address leave your person at any time. The worst thing that could happen is to arrive and find out your baggage didn't make it and you have no way of getting to your new school. Buy a travel wallet and secure your important clothes in a pocket inside your bag. Never let them out of your sight. 4. _____ 5. _____

Do bring a few small gifts from home, especially if you're staying with a host family. They'll be delighted to receive something from your home city and will return the favour before you leave.

6. _____

- 2 Read and answer T (True) or F (False).

Travel Boom

In the last years, the number of young tourists has grown more than any other group and backpackers may finally be getting some respect, at least from an economic point of view. According to a recent study, young people are travelling more, staying away for longer periods of time and spending more money. They now represent 20 percent of international tourism, making the group an important economic force. The research shows that the nature of youth travel has changed enormously in the past decade and it is clear that young people now see travel as an integral part of their future.

A few highlights from the research:

- More young people than ever before are traveling to gain work, educational and cultural experiences, than those travelling for holiday only.

- According to the report, 22 percent of young travellers want to learn a language, 15 percent want to gain work experience, and 15 percent travel to study.
- Young travellers are spending longer periods of time abroad. Trips of over 60 days have increased over the last five years.
- There has been a significant increase in travellers identifying themselves as 'flashpackers,' or backpackers who travel with laptops, smart phones and other high-tech gadgets.
- Hostels have become the most popular form of accommodation; they are now adapting to modern young travellers.
- The places that young people are travelling to are changing; they are spending less time in big cities and are exploring more remote destinations than before.

- Young people are travelling more than other people.
- When young people travel, they spend less money now than in the past.
- Twenty percent of tourists around the world are young people.
- More young people travel for educational reasons than on holiday.
- Young people usually stay abroad for periods of 60 days or less.
- Young people make use of technology when travelling.
- Big cities are the favourite destination of young people.
