The less you take, the better

I've been to gigs very frequently and have seen great bands in amazing places. This has definitely not been cheap, but it has been lots of fun. I am a pro when it comes to concert going. I've been to the small venues and to the big ones, the expensive and the cheap ones, the ones that are near and the ones that are far, so I'm now ready to give you the guidelines every music fan should follow when going to a show:

1. Wear a T-shirt under a long-sleeved shirt and a light raincoat. At a concert you move a lot so you aren't cold. You can tie the long-sleeved shirt around your waist and keep on jumping for hours! But most concerts end late, so you want something warm to get you home.
2. You might need to sit on the floor, or someone might spill a drink on you. These are comfortable, with pockets and easy to wash. They're perfect! A few friends of mine think a concert is a fashion show, and they have destroyed some pretty expensive clothing items.

3. I've seen lots of girls who want to look good and wear heels. Big mistake! You need to be ready to stand for a long time and also to dance. Trust me: you don't want to suffer while you're there. And dancing barefoot is not a good idea either—people can step on your feet!
4. Take just enough to buy a souvenir and to have a soft drink or a snack during the concert. Don't take credit cards. I have got friends who have lost them and got in a lot of trouble with their parents!
5. Make sure your jeans have got a pocket in front where you can keep it. It has to be safe, but also ready for concert selfies.
6. Important. Sometimes you need it to use the bathrooms.
And that's my list.
7. is a common saying in English. Definitely, to enjoy a concert, the less you take the more fun ahead!
