Hi. My name is Lúcia. I'm 23 years old. I'm a top model from Brazil. The language in Brazil is Portuguese, but my blog is in English.

I'm a student at an international language school in England. English, not Portuguese, is the official language in England. English is very important for models.

I'm not in the capital of England; I'm in Liverpool. Sheila is the teacher in my class. She isn't English. She's Australian. English is the language in Australia too.

The students in my class are from Argentina, Spain, Italy, France and Switzerland. One student, Sasha, is from Russia!

Lúcia is thirty-two. F

Bollywood
Home of the Indian film industry

Bollywood isn't a town or a city. It's only a name. Indian films are made in Mumbai. Mumbai is the Indian name for Bombay, a very big city on the west coast of India. Indian film directors never make westerns or science fiction films because they aren't popular. They make romantic musicals. In films, Indian actors always sing and dance a lot. The glamorous actresses wear saris (long Indian costumes) and the actors also wear typical Indian clothes in red, blue, orange and yellow. At the end of a Bollywood film, the main actor and actress usually fall in love ... and sing and dance, of course!

1 READING. Read the text. Answer the questions. (5 points)

Bollywood means films: not westerns or war films, but romantic musicals. Bollywood is the name of the multi-million dollar Indian film industry. Every year approximately two hundred films are made in the city of Bombay – or Mumbai as they say in India – on the west coast of the country. It isn't only people in India who watch these films; Indians in Great Britain go to see them at special cinemas in big cities or buy them on DVD. Bollywood films usually have happy endings: the main actress and actor usually fall in love and marry.

1 READING. Read the text. Write true (T) or false (F). (10 points)'My Grandmother's Story' by Tina Hardcastle

My grandmother was born in London on 1st September, 1940, exactly one year after the Second World War began. It was very dangerous in London then. Every night bombs fell and destroyed parts of the city. At night, everybody slept in the Underground. One morning my grandmother and her parents got up and went back to their house but it wasn't there. 'You must leave London,' my grandmother's father said, 'I am going to the war'. So they went to live in Blackpool, on the coast. At the weekend my grandmother played on the beach. Her mother worked in a shop from Monday to Friday.

The war in Europe finished in 1945 and my grandmother's father came back to England one year after that. 'I don't want to go back to London,' my grandmother said. 'Let's stay here, please'. So they stayed in Blackpool, and my grandmother still lives there with her husband, Bill.

'My Grandmother's Story' by Tina Hardcastle

My grandmother was born in London, England, on 1st September, 1940, almost exactly one year after the Second World War began. Living in London was very dangerous. Every night bombs fell and destroyed parts of the city, so at night my grandmother and her parents slept in the Underground. One morning they got up and went back to their street, but it was in ruins, and their house wasn't there. 'You can't live here,' my grandmother's father said, 'You must leave London. I am going to the war in North Africa'.

So they went to live in Blackpool, in the north of the country. My grandmother's mother worked in a shop from Monday to Friday. The war in Europe finished in 1945 and my grandmother's father came back to England a year after that. 'I don't want to go back to London,' my grandmother said, 'Why don't we stay here?' So they did, and my grandmother still lives there with her husband, Bill.
