1 READING. Read the text. Write true (T) or false (F). (10 points)Madagascar

Madagascar is in the Indian Ocean, near the east coast of Africa. There are volcanoes and mountains in the north, and a small desert at the other end of the island, but around the capital, Antananarivo, in the centre of the country, there are many trees. The trees contain five per cent of the world's animal and plant species, and 80 per cent of these are unique to the island. This is the only place in the world where a small animal called the lemur lives.

There's very little work in Madagascar and the people aren't rich. There's little tourism. There's some commerce with other countries, but not much; Madagascar sells minerals to China, for example. Now the government wants to destroy a lot of the trees to open a vast new mine. 'It's good for the economy,' says the government. But destroying the trees and plants also means no natural home for the lemur. Does it mean the end for this beautiful animal?

Madagascar is an island. T

The science fiction writer Arthur C. Clarke has some peculiar predictions for the future. Man will land on Mars, but will find something unusual there. Some horrible things will, in fact, produce good results: an atomic bomb will destroy a third-world city, but we will then destroy all nuclear bombs. Other changes will probably not be good: artificial intelligence will be similar to human intelligence and two intelligent species will inhabit the Earth – one biological and the other technological. A zoo containing cloned dinosaurs will open in California in 2023. However, Clarke thinks that the first human clone already exists.

Arthur C. Clarke is an author of science fiction books. T

GLOBAL WARMING – WILL THERE BE AN AMAZON RAINFOREST NEXT CENTURY?

'No,' say scientists, 'we aren't optimistic. Our computers predict that the Amazon Jungle is going to disappear. It will soon be a desert.' Every year farmers destroy millions of trees to plant soy. Enormous ships take the soy to Europe, where farmers use it as food for farm animals, especially chickens. But while a few people are getting richer quickly, the original indigenous people haven't got any water – in one of the wettest places on Earth! 'We are going to stop it,' says the Brazilian government, 'but it isn't just a problem for our country; global warming will be bad for the whole planet.'

Experts are pessimistic about the future of the Amazon rainforest. T

Exclusive Interview with Frederic Ponsomby

Freddie Ponsomby, ten-year-old son of millionaire Lord Ponsomby, is back home with his parents after disappearing yesterday afternoon, when two men took his father's black Mercedes from outside Clarrods Sweet Shop.

Question: Tell us what happened, Freddie.

Answer: Well, we were in the car and I was hungry, so my driver Maddox stopped and went into the shop ...

Q: And what happened next?

A: Maddox was in the shop and I was in the car with my new comic when, suddenly, two men opened the door and started driving the car. Then they saw me. First they shouted 'Wha...?! Who are you?'. Then one said 'No speaking', and 'You mustn't scream!' So, I didn't.

Q: Did you see their faces?

A: No, I couldn't. They were wearing big hats and black sunglasses. After that we travelled for about an hour and finally stopped. I opened the door and escaped.

Q: And what will happen next?

A: Oh, my dad will catch them! He wants his Mercedes back. And I want my comic back, too. It's in the car ...

How old is Freddie?

Ten years old.

1 Who is Freddie with now?

2 What colour is his father's car?

3 Is Maddox Freddie's father?

4 Where was Maddox when the men took Freddie?

5 Why did Maddox go there?

6 Do you think the men were pleased to see Freddie?

A true story: the miracle of the Andes

There were 45 people on the plane that left Montevideo on 12th October, 1972. The plane was flying over Argentina when the pilot said: 'We must land at the Mendoza airport because the weather is bad. We can't go to Santiago de Chile today.' But the next day, the weather was worse, and when they were flying over the Andes, which are the highest mountains in South America, the plane crashed and a lot of people died.

'They'll try to find us,' said Nando Parrado. They waited. Three planes came but didn't see them. More people were dying because the nights were extremely cold and they only had a little to eat. Finally Nando said: 'If we stay here, we're all going to die. I'm going to find someone to save us. Who'll come with me?' Two others said 'We'll come.' They walked through the snow for ten days. They finally discovered a farmer more than ten weeks after leaving Uruguay. Only sixteen people survived.

The plane was carrying 45 people. T

Tom: Did you enjoy your weekend in the city, Fred?

Fred: No, Tom, I didn't! You can't do anything there! We went by car, but we couldn't drive in the centre of the city – there were 'No Parking' signs everywhere.

We went to a park, but we couldn't sit down and eat our sandwiches, because a sign said 'You mustn't walk or sit on the grass' and a man said 'You can't eat in the park'.

So we decided to go to the cinema. We wanted to see the new Chinese film 'Yu Wen Lao Shi'.

Tom: Pardon? How do you spell that?

Fred: Y-U ... W-E-N [pause] L-A-O ... S-H-I

Tom: Oh ... well, was it good?

Fred: I don't know! We couldn't see it because Mike and Judy aren't eighteen!

Next year I'll be eighteen. I'm finishing school next summer, too. I want to travel for a year before I go to university. First I'm going to go to Tarifa, in the south of Spain, because I love windsurfing. I'm only going to take my swimming trunks, my towel and my sunglasses. I'm going to take them in a small rucksack. My girlfriend Emma is coming too. We're going to travel by plane and coach because it's faster and cheaper than the train. Emma is more intelligent than me, and she can speak Spanish, so she's making all the plans on the Internet. It'll be the longest holiday in our lives and I think it's going to be very exciting!
